

Lawson named vice mayor; resolutions debated

Councilman Oscar Lawson was appointed as Seaside's Mayor pro tem at last week's regular city council meeting.

The only opposing vote came from Mayor B.J. Dolan, who accused Lawson of being opposed to the redevelopment agency's Laguna Grande Project, which he said cost the city $250,000 and 150 jobs, and of helping to block a proposed hotel-motel complex for Seaside.

Other councilmen watched silently as the two clashed.

"I said I wasn't satisfied with the K-Mart because a thorough study had not been made," Lawson said in response to Dolan's accusations. "And my position was that the beach complex be built back so that the beach would remain free. This has been the position of the state, too."

Lawson was nominated for the position by Councilman Steve Ross, with the expressed hope that, if approved, Lawson would work in close cooperation with the mayor. The vote to appoint Lawson was 3-1, with Councilman Glenn Olea abstaining.

Fireworks also erupted earlier in the meeting between Lawson and Dolan over the former's proposed resolution to honor a high school athlete, Kirk Collins of Seaside High School, for his winning the high jump competition at the recent San Jose relays.

When Dolan protested the resolution, Lawson countered by asking that "The record" reflect that Dolan allegedly had tried to force him out of a picture-taking scenario last week in connection with the city's purchase, with some funds from Sand City, of a new fire engine.

"You pushed me back and said you don't have any right to be in the picture, Mr. Mayor," Lawson said.

Dolan said that he was asked, when recently interviewing candidates for Boy's State at Seaside High School, what business the city council had in honoring an athlete.

"What about recognition for achievers in other areas?" Dolan asked. "What is governmental recognition for?"

Dolan then opened a blackboard filled with chalk questions about the propriety of such a resolution and asked Lawson to respond to them.

"I think the youth of today need some encouragement," Lawson said. "That's the only purpose. I've always supported your resolutions, Mr. Mayor. I think we should recognize a youth who is using his energy in a constructive way. Why are you singling me out, Mr. Mayor?"

"I'm not singling you out," Dolan replied. "I'm singling out this kind of resolution."

"We need to sit down and make up some kind of a policy on these resolutions," suggested Councilman Joe Cota. "Every resolution that's come before me, I've voted for. I move we pass this resolution."

Councilman Steve Ross said it was a "most embarrassing thing" to squabble over resolutions, and "to have this constant hassle come up." Councilman Glenn Olea suggested establishing some sort of review process for council resolutions before they are approved.

"That opens up a can of worms when Councilman Olea says council resolutions should go through some sort of review," Cota said. "What makes the mayor so much wiser, that he can determine in his own mind what comes before us?"

"I have asked that information be submitted to me in writing," Dolan said. "I had to do some digging this afternoon to find out that Rick Collins lives across the street from Oscar Lawson. I'm only suggesting that this is the sort of thing that should be recognized by the Monterey Peninsula Unified School District, and their coaches."

But Councilman Ross said the resolution was one of dozens of others routinely approved by the council with the intent of "patting someone on the back."

Lawson, sputtering with anger, said: "I've never seen anyone more hypocritical than you, Mr. Mayor!"

The resolution was passed with the lone dissenting vote cast by Dolan.

In another matter, the city council gave its approval to the city staff to pursue possible purchase of two parcels of land to be included in the Seaside Redevelopment Agency's Laguna Grande Project.

The two parcels are owned by Phil Calabrese and amount to some two acres of land. They are situated in the midst of a large area scheduled to be included in the Monterey Peninsula Regional Parks District as open space, but are zoned for other uses.

City Mgr. Dudley Lapham said the two acres in question will have to be excluded from parks district plans because they will have commercial uses, and could fit well into the Laguna Grande Project. The parcels are located on either side of a proposed channel to be out through the lake situated near Del Monte Boulevard.

The city will now make its intent known to the parks district. Gary Tate, general manager of the parks district, thanked the council for its action and said the district is "very interested in working with Seaside and Monterey to acquire parcels which would be an asset to the entire Monterey Peninsula."

Cleve Williams, the city's recreation director, told the council that a schedule of events for the Bicentennial celebration has been drawn up. The first is a kickoff barbecue scheduled for May 18, at which between 700 to 800 persons are expected. Other events include a wagon train expedition Sept. 28, and monthly ethnic artists' shows at city hall, ethnic festival days, parades and drum and bugle corps field contests.

Other projects contemplated by the Bicentennial committee include the printing of a souvenir book, a city-wide clean up campaign, and the possibility of painting all the fireplugs in Seaside red, white and blue.

Councilman Steve Ross noted that the Kiwanis Club is in the process of seeking to have installed in front of every business in town an American flag to be displayed on certain days, and the local American Legion post is trying to obtain some sort of Bicentennial flags.

City Mgr. Dudley Lapham said the city, for an expenditure of $250, could install metal sleeves in holes in the sidewalks in front of local businesses to encourage flag-flying. The holes were installed recently by the city, he noted. The council approved his recommendation for the $250.

City Atty. Carey Royster told councilmen that Dolan, Olea and Lawson will have to file statement of financial disclosure under terms of Prop. 9 by April 11.

Parent discussion group organized in Seaside

The Adult School is offering "Parents Talk Together," a support and discussion group for parents of young children designed to enhance child rearing roles.

Topics to be discussed include family relationships and roles, normal child development, health and safety, and the use of music and art in the process. Special assistance is provided for new parent adjustment and breastfeeding skills. Single and foster parents are encouraged to attend as well as couples.

Transportation assistance and child care can be arranged by calling the instructor, and infants are welcome at the class sessions. The classes are held at 7 p.m. on Tuesdays at Seaside High School, Room H-27. Interested persons may call Margot Edwards, parent educator and family life specialist, at 375-1974 after 3 p.m.

Those persons interested in the possibility of a similar class during the daytime may call her.

Ord soldiers get special academic training

For 60 soldiers of Fort Ord's Second Battalion, 17th Infantry, Easter vacation didn't mean much. They just began a six-week refresher course in high school subjects before the "outside" vacation started.

The soldiers are attending a normal duty day of seven hours' study, devoted to courses in math, English, general sciences, social studies and literature.

Very quickly dubbed "Buffalo High School" in reference to the Buffalo Soldiers of the 7th Division's 17th Infantry, the courses are given at the unit dining facility.

"The purpose of this course," said Mrs. Edna Snell, coordinator for the course from Fort Ord's Education Center, "is to lead to a high school equivalency diploma".

Although the class is large, individual guidance and counseling is provided by four teachers and two teachers' aids from the installation Education Center.

THE FIRST increment in federal funds from the Economic Development Administration in the amount of $69,000 was presented to Seaside for its public library, now under construction. Those present were (from left): Cleve Williams, recreation director; Mayor B.J. Dolan; Hugh Taylor, regional representative from EDA in Oakland; and City Councilman Steve Ross. The federal government is spending $290,000 on the project, which is costing $455,000. (John Perkins photo).

Nineteenth Century focused upon in new Gentrain course

A continuation of the concepts developed in the "Age of Enlightenment," together with the forces which came to bear in the late 19th century, will be the field of study in Monterey Peninsula College's next Gentrain course, "The Nineteenth Century: Part II."

Classes begin Tuesday, April 15 and will be held each Tuesday and Thursday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. for two weeks.

The years to be studied in part two of the "Nineteenth Century" are from 1860 in MPC's Lecture Forum 102. Gentrain courses are open to students for college credit and to community members on a non-credit basis for those who are just interested in learning about their world, said Robert Nelson, Gentrain director. No tests or papers are required under this option.

through 1914. "This was a period of increasingly rapid change and of synthesis of ideas of the first half of the century which had resulted from the conflicts between the rationalism of the Enlightenment and romantic reactions to it," said Nelson.

The tensions of the age were reflected in all of the humanities and in many cases the arts were utilized as a means of expressing strong political points of view.

Nelson said this was the time of Darwin's influence, the rise of Marxism and other radical theories for social change, and of political events which would culminate in World War I.

County fair premiums increased for this year

An increase of some $5,000 in Monterey County Fair and National Horse Show premiums was announced recently when the fair's board of directors met in Monterey.

A total of $78,939 in premiums is being offered this year, according to George Wise, secretary-manager, who told the board that $71,000 had been paid out in premiums at the 1974 Fair and Horse Show. The National Horse Show is set for July 31-Aug. 9 at the fairground, and the 1975 fair dates are Aug. 26-31.

Wise also told the board the Monterey County Fair has been re-classified from 1 (smallest) to 6 (largest) by the Fair Budget Review Board in Sacramento.

"We are always penalized in these classifications because of the size of our fairgrounds," he said. "Monterey has one of the smallest fairgrounds in the state."

Board members contracted for $8,400 worth of temporary stalls for the Horse Show, and granted the request of Concerned Citizens, represented by Thomas Nash, for a benefit concert by the Tower of Power to be held at the fairgrounds on an afternoon in May.

MATH AND SCIENCE instructor, Bunny Greenhouse explains operation of the refresher course to "Buffalo" soldiers of the 2nd Battalion, 17th Infantry, beginning on-duty classes that lead to high school completion.

SEASIDE SPOTLIGHT: Mrs. Grace Hennington

'We've separated our society too much'

By ROBERT MISKIMON

Mrs. Grace Hennington of Seaside believes elderly people in America have not been given a fair shake. And she intends to do something about it.

As regional assistant to the state director of the American Association of Retired Persons, Mrs. Hennington, a retired school teacher, works to bring retired persons more into the mainstream of society and to help meet their very real, but often ignored, needs.

The 8 million-member organization has about 240 members in the local Chapter 97 on the Monterey Peninsula, and Mrs. Hennington's area of responsibility includes Monterey, Saratoga, Morgan Hill, Santa Cruz, Hollister, Santa Clara, and San Jose.

The American Association of Retired Persons functions in two main areas concerning elderly persons: legislation and insurance. It is a powerful Washington lobby which is always consulted by lawmakers before any legislation affecting senior citizens is enacted.

And the organization operates its own insurance programs for members which offers substantial savings, based on the premise that elderly persons are no greater risks than any other people, and that their rates should reflect that statistic.

Those are two vital areas affecting elderly persons, but the broader concern is with the stereotyping of older Americans which is just as damaging as racial or sexual stereotyping, Mrs. Hennington believes.

"People are beginning to take a look at the older American and to realize there's a great amount of experience and knowledge to be drawn on," she observed. "If we have a lot of unemployment, I think the young people with families should have the jobs. But this thing of putting old people in nursing homes when they have so much to offer only increases their senility."

Mrs. Hennington believes shoving the elderly out of the mainstream of society is just as bad for the young as for the old folks themselves.

"How will the children of this generation have any feeling for their elders if they never see them? We've separated our society too much. Margaret Mead says we need the three generations in one family again."

Although there are more vocal organizations of senior citizens than AARP, Mrs. Hennington feels her organization has made some real headway since its formation in 1958. The organization was started by Ethel Percy Andrus, a retired school principal from Los Angeles.

Distressed by the situation of retired teachers in California, since in 1947 they received only $50 per month in retirement benefits from which they were required to pay income taxes, she sought to create a group that would improve retirement conditions.

The result was the formation of the National Retired Teachers Association, which came into existence when Miss Andrus was 63 years old. Shortly thereafter, she met a young insurance man in his 20s named Leonard Davis, who figured out a way to offer elderly persons insurance rates comparable to those paid by younger citizens.

"He did some research on retired persons and found out they were not the risk a lot of people thought they were," Mrs. Hennington explained.

With the encouragement and assistance of Miss Andrus, medical insurance policies were made available to members of the Retired Teachers Association through the efforts of Leonard Davis, who is now an honorary president of the organization.

Encouraged by the success of the teachers' organization, elderly persons began writing to Miss Andrus to ask that some type of group be established for a broader segment of the retired. The result, in 1958, was the creation of the American Association of Retired Persons.

Mrs. Hennington said its growth in membership from 2 million in 1970 to some 8 million this year reflects the growing number of retired and elderly persons in this country, and the extent to which their needs have been ignored.

"There would be a lot more concern about the situation of elderly people if everyone realized that today's young people are tomorrow's senior citizens," she said.

Mrs. Hennington came to the Monterey Peninsula in 1946 and taught as a substitute teacher. Raised in a small town in the Mid-West, she attended a normal school for teachers and passed her teaching exam at the age of 12.

Before moving to California, she had worked with Douglas Aircraft in the accounting department in Oklahoma, but turned to teaching because of a great need for teachers at that time. She started teaching in California with an "emergency credential" and went back to San Jose State College to obtain her B.E. degree in 1960.

But in the interim, she taught for a decade in the Chualar schools in the Salinas Valley, and also taught in the Marina schools for two years. Mrs. Hennington taught inductees at Fort Ord in 1968 and 1969, at the peak years of opposition to the American role in the Indochina War.

Mrs. Hennington was shocked at the low level of literacy among some of the inductees, and noted a connection between an inadequate educational level and disciplinary problems. So, she required her students in remedial classes to write autobiographies, which often provided them with the opportunity to confront something that had been festering in their subconscious.

Sometimes, the results were positive and students took steps to correct whatever was the basis for their behavioral problems; other times they sought even more desperately to escape themselves and the world. But most often, Mrs. Hennington said, the results were positive.

After her teaching experiences, Mrs. Hennington worked through a grant awarded the Seaside Civic League on a program on aging, with the assistance of Betty Corr and she attended the White House Conference on Aging in 1971 when appointed as delegate by Former Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Mrs. Hennington believes AARP is becoming increasingly more effective in getting legislation passed to benefit seniors. An example of this was the inclusion last year of many welfare benefits to which seniors were entitled on their Social Security checks. The AARP, the National Chamber of Commerce, and labor unions argued that this method of releasing the funds allowed the seniors to retain their pride and did not make them feel like wards of the state, Mrs. Hennington said.

The AARP has an internship program for college students interested in careers in gerontology, and also operates a pharmacy where members may purchase both prescription and non-prescription drugs at reduced rates.

"We're trying to correct the public's image that senior citizens, once they're retired, are of no use to anybody," Mrs. Hennington said. "Some people think sex is just for young people. But once you're retired, very often your needs and desires are just as great."

"Television, I think, is proof of the age stereotyping in our society, as well as the expression 'little old lady in tennis shoes.' We separate our society too much."

Deadline announced for homeowner's exemption forms

Homeowners have until April 15 to file either a claim for homeowners' property tax exemption or an exemption termination notice.

County Assessor Donald P. Stewart said changes in state law provide that an owner who received the exemption last year does not need to file a claim again this year if he is still occupying the same residence as he was at the time he previously filed. If an owner is still eligible for exemption on the same home, his exemption will carry over from last year.

If the person is no longer eligible, however, because he has moved or sold the property, he must file an exemption termination notice with the assessor. Each person who received the exemption last year has been sent a termination notice form and the assessor emphasized that this form should be signed only if the person is no longer eligible for exemption on the same property.

Stewart said there is no limitation on the amount of income an owner may have or on the amount of property he may own to remain eligible for the homeowners' exemption. The exemption also extends to land upon which the owner has a mobile home in which he lives, or to a dwelling unit in an apartment or condominium, if owned by the occupant.

For those unable to read English, the forms are also printed in Spanish this year, in compliance with another amendment to the law.

Waste water hearings scheduled locally

Opinions, ideas and suggestions on the various possibilities for reclaiming and reusing wastewater in the Salinas-Monterey-Santa Cruz area will be sought by the Corps of Engineers in a series of workshops to be held in mid-April.

All meetings will start at 7:30 p.m. and the first will be held in Gilroy on April 14 at Gavilan Junior College.

Others will convene in Salinas on April 15 in the City Hall Rotunda, 200 Lincoln Ave.; in Monterey April 16 at City Hall, Madison and Pacific Streets; and in Aptos on April 23 at the Cabrillo College Center.

Col. H.A. Flertzheim, Jr., San Francisco District

Engineer, said anyone interested in this field, including the technology involved as well as potential uses for the water, will be welcome to present views and data.

Flertzheim envisions the $1,325,000 congressionally-authorized study as one which will provide information and a range of alternatives so that local, regional and State boards may participate in planning and designing programs for water resources development.

Long-range wastewater management is one of the water resources the Corps of Engineers is investigating under the Salinas Basin-Monterey Bay Urban Study Program. The purpose of the Urban Study Program is to develop a range of integrated, feasible water resources planning alternatives, under different future conditions, for state and local consideration.

Based on suggestions received to date, the corps has under review available information on alternative disposal sites, treatment levels, land disposal reuse options, and potential economic feasibility of various wastewater reclamation proposals.

In order to assess what has been done in the area, corps' personnel have met with area planning officials, soil conservation service administrators, county farm advisors, various water and flood control districts, and public works officers during January and February. In addition to wastewater management, discussions included area water supply and water quality conditions.

Maximum public participation at the workshops is encouraged so that any wastewater alternatives developed in the future will meet the needs of the area and be acceptable to those affected.

Nadas to perform in Monterey

Istvan Nadas, the internationally renowned pianist, will be presented in concerts at 8 p.m. April 11 and 12 in Ingersoll Hall on the Naval Postgraduate School (NPS) campus. The concerts are part of the NPS Friday Evening Concert Series.

Nadas will play Beethoven's Sonata in A-flat major, Opus 110; Chopin's Sonata in B-flat minor, Opus 35; Shubert's "Piece" of 1828; and Brandt's Toccata. The latter, dedicated to Nadas, is described by him as "a gigantic piece." The program will be the same both nights. The public is invited. A native Hungarian and a student of Bartok, Kodaly, and Weiner, Nadas, in his teens, was already a concert artist in Europe, when his career was interrupted by his internment in a German concentration camp.

After the war he resumed his career, became director of the piano department at the National Conservatory of Caracas, Venezuela, and in 1953 moved to the United States. He has served on the faculties of Loyola University and San Francisco State University, and is now professor of music and artist in residence at Washington State University.

Considered one of the giants of the keyboard, Nadas has been acclaimed for his playing by critics the world around.

The New York Times commented on his "technique, musicianship, breadth of taste and a freshness and individuality of vision." The Times of London went even further: "Nadas has the intellectual and physical power to match his soul to that of the composer..."

Tickets for each concert at $3.50 are available at Abinante's Music Store in Monterey, Lily Walker's in Pacific Grove, Bartlett's in Carmel, and at the NPS Student Mail Center between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. daily. For further information, call the NPS Public Affairs Office at 646-2023.

Parent education course uses T-M techniques

"Family Focus", a parent education course using Transactional Analysis, is being offered by the Monterey Peninsula YMCA beginning April 28.

While many people are trained in a variety of skills, few receive the training in skills that are required to be a parent in today's world. The six three hour sessions presented April 28, May 5, 12, 19, June 2 and 9, will help parents to see their family in a new light and with a new perspective.

Transactional Analysis is one method for helping parents to understand their children and themselves. It is a simple way of interpreting why people behave as they do and how best to respond in interactions with other adults and children. The Family Focus program can lead to better understanding of one's children and their own parental role.

Participation is the theme of "Family Focus". There will be an opportunity for each participant to be involved in the discussions and real family issues will be part of every session. Each class will be limited in size with a minimum of 12 people.

The "Family Focus" sessions will be held at the Monterey Peninsula YMCA at 404 Camino El Estero in Monterey from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. Registration deadline is April 21. Telephone for further information 373-4166.

The quality of family life can be greatly affected by the course. Family living doesn't have to include hard feelings and one can enjoy their family more than they ever imagined. Each participant will learn skills that will be useful to him in improving the quality of family life.

Fees for the course at $40 a couple or $30 per person for YMCA members and $50 per couple or $40 per person for non-members.

Weekend mini-course offered

"Self-Discovery Through Art" is the title of the next personal development weekend mini-course offered by Monterey Peninsula College. Class begins at 5 p.m. Thursday, April 3 in room A-7.

The series is being offered by MPC to allow community residents the opportunity to get practical and personal improvement information in quick doses.

"Self-Discovery Through Art" will explore various art media and modalities within a specialized setting that facilitates and stimulates creativity. The goal of this class is a search for the self and not for art talent.

Grace Forrest, course instructor and registered art therapist of Carmel who previously taught art therapy in New York, said the course is for people who need to use the art medium as a method of communication, a graphic communication which is some cases can be most effective.

Ms. Forrest added that the course will include some of the skills used in art therapy, including methods fostering personal growth and self awareness. Some of the art therapy skills which can be used in counseling situations will also be demonstrated.

The mini-course carries one-half unit of college credit and may be taken for a letter grade or credit-no-credit.

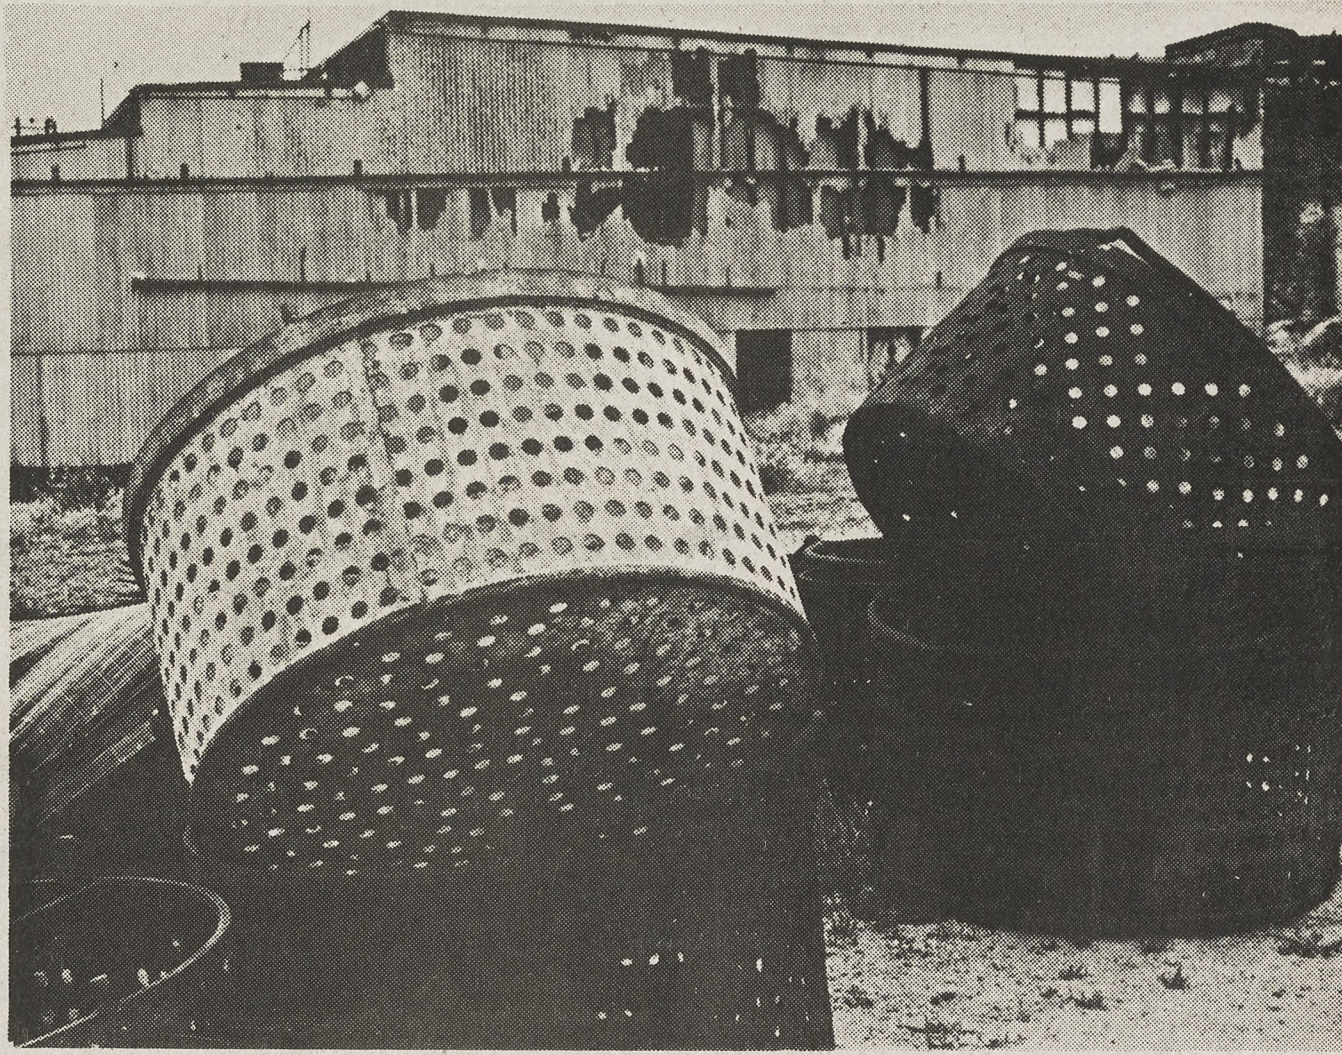

Church announces event

The Church of Religious Science, 400 W. Franklin St. is planning their annual what-not sale Saturday, April 12 from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Some of the highlights of the sale are the bakery department, boutiques and a plant section. There are clothes for the entire family, kitchenware, linens, books and appliances.

Light lunches and snacks are available from the church kitchen while you browse.

Mrs. Alberta Monlux is the project chairman, with Mrs. Pat Tinsley in charge of the bake sale and Mrs. Nancy Claypool organizing the plant department.

FISH POTS at Cannery Row in the days when the canneries were processing fish, rather than tourists, provided the subject matter for this photo in the current city hall show.

New photo exhibit displayed in city hall

Carmelite Joanna Rozelle Austen is the featured artist in this month's display at Seaside City Hall.

Some 50 photographs, both stirring landscapes and seascapes, and lively portraits of children, are on display, with some of her most unusual and arresting pottery.

A native of England, she became involved in photography about three years ago in an effort to record some of her pottery. Soon, she was splitting her time between both, and she now has a darkroom in her kitchen.

All of her photographs are taken with a 35-mm camera, and they display both technical expertise as well as esthetic proportion. Some of the most interesting photos in the exhibit are her cameos of children.

Ms. Austen was born in 1915 in England and received several awards from the Royal Academy for her drawings and paintings while in high school. Her college years were interrupted by the depression. While working, she studied interior design, decorating, life drawing, and sculpture at the Westminster School of Art in London.

In 1938, she married and discontinued all her formal art studies until she came to Toronto, Canada in 1952. She lived there until 1962, when she came to Carmel to make her home. She later attended Marin College for life drawing, painting and sculpture.

Ms. Austen soon dropped sculpture for pottery, which has been her principal interest since. She has been a member of Peninsula Potters since the organization's inception several years ago.

The exhibit at Seaside city hall is open to the public between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays.

SHRINE MEETS

The I.B.P.O.E.-W. Shrine's seventh annual regional conference will be held April 18 through 20 at the Holiday Inn in Monterey.

Lend a hand!

The Volunteers In Action has released the needs requests for the Seaside Outreach Office for this month. If you can lend a hand in any of the ones that are listed, please give them a call or drop by the office. The address is 880 Broadway and the phone number is 899-4511.

-- Someone is needed to help with the managing of the budget of low income families. This is a wonderful opportunity for someone to really help families get ahead today. Give the Outreach Office a call.

-- If a Benefit Shop is the place you like to help in, there is an opportunity for you today. The work is fun and the hours are open. Call 899-4511 for more information.

-- The senior citizens of the Seaside community are in desperate need of transportation to doctors, dentists and even to see their immediate family when they can no longer travel by themselves. They would be most grateful for any amount of time you can give.

-- A TV repairman is needed to help keep the senior citizens' television sets in working condition. If you like working with electrical equipment and know how, give the Outreach Office a call... 899-4511

-- A morning receptionist is needed in a Seaside office. No typing skills are required; answering the phone and recording messages is all that is required.

From the Seaside Outreach Office comes a program that can involve men, women and teenagers; it's called Project Buddy. Project Buddy is a group of volunteers working with children six to 16 years old on a one-to-one basis. These "Big Buddies" simply serve as friends of children, "Little Buddies" who, for one reason or another, have not the adult companionship they so desperately need.

The goal is to provide a consistent and reliable relationship with the children. Both male and female adults ages 18 to 80 act as Big Buddies and make a commitment to meet once a week with their Little Buddies for a period of six months or more.

Call the Seaside Outreach Office if you want to consider being a Big Buddy. Call 899-4511.

The public is invited to the open house for the Seaside Outreach Office, 880 Broadway, to be held at 11 a.m., April 22. Coffee and donuts will be served.

Dear Editor:

I understand the "Urban Renewal Agency" of Seaside, will be publishing another "Self-Serving" brochure. While I have serious doubts as to the propriety of spending tax payer's money on such a project, it would be an outrageous fraud not to include a full and complete disclosure as to where and to whom the Twenty Million dollars spent on Urban Renewal Projects in Seaside went. How much went to -

1. Land acquisition;
2. Legal fees;
3. Administrative salaries;
4. Equipment and supplies;

6. Interest cost on bonds (and who paid any deficits).

A clear and full disclosure is a must to the taxpayers that have, are, and will be paying, and paying, in the years to come.

Informing the citizens, how their tax dollars have been spent, would be meaningful, open and highly desirable. This would go a long way to clear up the constant discussion of whether "Urban Renewal" in Seaside has been for the benefit of the few at the sacrifice of the many.

Swim teams stay active

Seaside Seagulls and Dolphins Blue Birds are still working hard. They had a meeting during Easter vacation to finish Easter craft. They also had an Easter party with cake and an Easter egg hunt. They took the bunnies made out of egg cartons home, and worked on invitations to our Founder's Day tea for parents and anyone who can come.

High school students to compete in jazz fest

High school student-musicians from throughout California will travel to Monterey June 7 to compete in the Fifth Annual California High School Jazz Band Competition. The event is sponsored by the Monterey Jazz Festival in cooperation with Monterey Peninsula College.

Ten bands, with two alternates and five combos will be selected to compete in the gymnasium of Monterey Peninsula College. Hundreds of students from more than 50 California high schools annually audition.

Competition is set to begin at 10 a.m. A scheduled evening show, open to the public at no charge, will feature the top three bands with the winning band selected by well-known, professional, jazz artists and leading educators.

The winning band and combo will be invited to perform at the Eighteenth Annual Monterey Jazz Festival, scheduled for Sept. 19, 20 and 21. Additionally, the winning high school band will receive a $500 cash award. The smaller jazz ensemble will receive a $250 cash award.

An All-Star Band will also be chosen from among the state's top high school jazz instrumentalists at the June 7 competition. The All-Star Band competition is open to all high school student musicians who wish to audition.

Musicians selected for the All-Star Band will be invited to perform at this year's Monterey Jazz Festival. They will appear as part of the regularly scheduled Sunday afternoon concert, Sept. 21, arriving Monday prior to the Festival to begin rehearsals with professional jazz artists.

Last year's All-Star Band performing at the 17th Annual Monterey Jazz Festival, under the direction of Ladd McIntosh and Don Schamber, was joined by Dizzy Gillespie, Gerry Mulligan, Bill Smith and Chuck Mangione.

"Lord's International" marionettes to perform

"Lord's International," music and marionettes for adults with solo marionettist Daniel Lords, will be presented at Monterey Peninsula College in two performances at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, April 11 and 12 in the college theatre. The programs will include

"Don Quixote," "Petrushka," "Les Petits Riens," "Firebird," and "Macbeth." The program will be different each night.

Lords, a former peninsula resident, characterizes his marionette productions as being "a long way from Punch and Judy." He was the first American ever to be invited to take part in the International Festival in Great Britain.

Admission to each performance is $2.50 general and $1.50 for Golden Card holders.

For further information contact the MPC Community Services' Office at 373-5522.
